Developing Structure for a Recovery Oriented Service System

Worksheet #2

DEVELOPING STRUCTURE FOR A RECOVERY-ORIENTED SERVICE SYSTEM

The following are additional recovery concepts frequently addressed among Dr. Ragin's various publications (2002, 2006, 2016) that are relevant to developing programs, policies, and procedures for a recovery-oriented service system.

Services Necessary to the Recovery Process—Top Priorities

- Peer-run services
- Professional services
- Living supports (food, clothing, shelter, sundries, transportation)
- Holistic (symptoms are addressed, but not in isolation from other aspects of the individual's life)
- Religious (for those consumers who are inclined toward religion)
- Media (helpful in public education and stigma reduction)
- Availability of crisis intervention
- Wellness Recovery Action Plan (a well-structured, self-directed, peer- and professional-supported approach to prevention and symptom management)
- Relapse prevention plan
- Culturally relevant services (considering the consumer's various cultural orientations: ethnic, national, socioeconomic, religious, client culture, and any other cultural identification important to the individual)
